LEGISLATIVE RACE IN 8TH DISTRICT IS BATTLE ROYAL

Legislative Voters' League
"Horns in" With Its Endorsements

Added interest was injected into the 8th district assembly race this week with the approach of the eleventh hour before the primaries next Tuesday and the appearance of reports on candidates for the general assembly as published in the "Assembly Bulletin," declared to be the "Official Publication of the Legislative Voters League of Illinois."

Also adding to the tenseness of the campaign is the fact that due to the ruling of the local senatorial committees, in line with the minority representation provision of the law, two Republicans and one Democrat are to be nominated. Since only three are to be elected in November, the primary next Tuesday virtually amounts to election.

Six Republican and an equal number of Democrats are in the race, with each and every candidate seeking support in all three counties, Lake, McHenry and Boone, which comprise the district.

Nick Keller Favored

Nick Keller, of Waukegan, sitting representatively, is given more than an even chance to be one of the nominees on the Republican ticket. Reports of major support in many parts of the district would seem to indicate that Keller must be conceded victory, according to political seers who have watched the race from the sidelines.

Who will be next to Keller in the vote getting is highly problematical. It has been said every candidate has a chance. The candidacy of Harold D. Kelsey of Barrington, is considered formidable due to the fact that he is a well-known public figure in Lake county, the most populous unit of the district; a member of the county board of supervisors, and an excellent campaigner.

Voters must also reckon with the chances of former State Legion Commander Charles C. Kapschill of Field, who is said to have the solid support of Republican ex-service men.

In McHenry county three active candidates are garnering votes with the hope of landing at least one Republican for their home county. They are Roy J. Stewart, three times elected to public office—twice to county office and later to the legislature; Victor O. Siegler, of Spring Grove, who led all

All farmers in this vicinity are urged to call at the high school Saturday to receive assistance of the county and community committee.

ANTIOCH MAN IS COMMISSIONED AS U. S. ARMY CAPTAIN

Laurel D. Powles Receives Promotion for Merit in O. R. C.

Laurel D. Powles, of Antioch is receiving the congratulations of his friends over his appointment as captain in the United States Organized Reserve Corps. His commission arrived Tuesday. He is assigned to the 411 Quartermaster Regiment.

Powles, who was enlisted in the officers' training corps during the world war, joined the Organized Reserve Corps in 1930, ten years after its formation in 1920. Starting as a 2nd lieutenant, he was given the rank of 1st lieutenant four years later, where he continued with his studies and periods of active service each year.

Due to army regulations that have to do with age of officers, it is explained that even though prospective officers may qualify for promotion much earlier, they must attain a certain age before commissions are granted. This plan prevents younger men in the O. R. C. from gaining promotions ahead of the men in line in the regular U. S. Army.

Congratulations, Captain Laurel D. Powles!

Also a member of the Organized Reserves is Dr. L. John Zimmerman, who is enlisted in the dental corps as a 1st lieutenant.

M. E. CHURCH PAYS OFF 12 YEAR DEBT

Rev. Henslee Praised as a "Go-getter; Mortgage Is Paid in Full

The members and friends of the Antioch Methodist Episcopal church have reason to rejoice this week. The debt of 12 years standing is paid in full.

The original amount, incurred in 1926, when the parsonage was remodeled, has been reduced little by little each year. Last fall the new minister, Rev. Warren C. Henslee, made the statement that before the year was over the local congregation would be free of the mortgage. In February he asked permission of the official board to raise the money. The pastor got the "green light" on his proposal, and he labored most diligently until April 3 when the victory was celebrated.

During those few weeks, less than two months, $620.65 was pledged. The remaining $52.65 was collected. The remaining $28 will be paid in the near future, the pastor reports.

The debt, including interest, amounted to $357. The remaining $235.65 was applied to the church budget which was in arrears.

At the victory service last Sunday morning the pastor extended sincere thanks to everyone who helped to make the drive a success. While he was very happy to receive the funds, to pay off the indebtedness, he declared the co-operation of the people meant vastly more to him than the actual money. The members give full credit to Rev. Henslee who solicited and collected all of the money himself and a personal service that gives the congregation a church free from debt.

Hold Funeral for Mrs. Scoggin Sat.

Funeral services for Mrs. Elmer Scoggin, 28, were held at String's funeral home Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock with the Rev. R. G. Griswold of the Mission Church of Zion, officiating. Burial was in Pine View cemetery.

Mrs. Scoggin's death occurred suddenly following the birth of a daughter last Wednesday. When her condition became extremely critical it was advised that she be removed to a hospital. Meanwhile two local physicians called to the home had done everything humanly possible to save her life, but death occurred before the arrival of the ambulance.

The grieving husband wishes it stated that there was nothing in the religious faith of his wife that prevented the attendance of a physician in any illness. She belonged to the Mission church in Zion.

She was the daughter of John and Ethel Cunningham, and she was born in Zion, Ill., July 16, 1909. Her father died in Sheridan, Wyoming, two weeks ago. Besides the infant daughter, who has been named Edith Catherine, she is survived by her husband and six other children, and her mother, Mrs. W. Odeit.

What's The Answer?

On January 4, 1935, President Roosevelt stood in the House of Representatives and declared:

"The federal government must and shall quit this relief business."

And then he asked congressional authority for a $4,000,000,000 spending program.

On January 18, 1936, President Roosevelt declared:

"If we can boondoggle ourselves out of this depression the word 'boondoggle' is going to be enshrined in the hearts of the American people for many years to come."

Another year has passed.

The federal government has not quit "this relief business."

And President Roosevelt appeals to Congress for more hundreds of millions of dollars to meet a new rise in unemployment. What's the answer?

Law Against Spare Tires

The present tax law which penalizes, through the undistributed profits tax, a conservative and thrifty industry for building up a reserve against hard times is like a law taxing an automobile driver for carrying a spare tire to insure uninterrupted operation.

A taxation or legislative policy which discourages and destroys industry, gradually sets the stage for advocates of state socialism to claim that private enterprise has broken down and that government must step in and operate the affairs of its citizens.

It seems fantastic that such a program is being deliberately promoted here. But that idea is growing in the minds of persons who have watched the current world trend to submerge the individual under government dictation, and the increasing drive to constantly inject government into business, and into the affairs of private citizens in our own country.

Hitler, who has conquered Austria and won the

He apparently won't find the going easy, however—the Czechoslovakian government has announced it will fight the Nazis to the last man, and has embarked on an ambitious a military expansion program as it can afford. It has France on its side. Thus, little by little, the contestants of the "next world war" are forming.

"Living Price" for Farm Products

Occasionally, farm co-operative marketing associations get in the doghouse so far as the consumer is concerned. The consumer mistakenly believes that these groups are attempting to force the price of farm products to the highest possible level.

Some co-ops may try this—but they are in the minority, and they are doomed to fail. The big far-sighted cooperatives know as well as anyone that you can't inflate prices unreasonably, without narrowing and destroying your market. What these co-ops are trying to do is to bring to the farmer a "living price" for what he raises—a price that will pay expenses, and return him some profit for his labor and his investment. And at the same time, they are trying to lower the cost of distribution, which is as important to the consumer as to the producer.

Agricultural marketing cooperation doesn't mean exploiting buyers. It means a balanced price, which is fair and attractive to all involved.

Cuts Wire for Aid

When a lone settler or traveler in the vast, uninhabited sections of Australia is sick, lost or in any other kind of serious trouble, he is permitted to cut a telegraph wire, an act which is a call for help, says Collier's Weekly. Linemen immediately ascertain, through electric instruments, where the cut was made, often hundreds of miles away, and set out oil once with food, water and first-aid equipment.

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—Bryn (James Brynildson III), a tall bronzed young man of twenty and his chum, Tubby Forges, are due to Bryn's coming marriage. Tubby is opposed to the scheme of getting it, a scheme to get Bryn's wealth from him. Should the girl, Deborah, whom Bryn had met at the office of his attorney, be his bride? Mr. Stuart Graham before his twenty-first birthday, she will inherit a vast fortune from her grandfather, Stuart. Stuart had been a gambler, who refused to marry him. But, as partner in an employed engineer, offers to marry Deborah, as Stuart, for $50,000, they not to live in man and wife. Twenty-three years previous, Stuart had eloped with an adventurer on the day of her wedding to Courtney Graham. Two days after the birth of her daughter, Anna, the baby died. Her father was killed in an accident. Her grandfather, took the child with them to Oregon, where, without child companion, Deborah grew up. To guard her from some fortune hunter, her grandfather had arranged for her to marry Stuart, son of Courtney Graham, when of age, believing the debts were fifteen thousand dollars. Securities had been set aside to keep the family, but a market crash left scarcely enough for them to live on. This brought them to Deborah's grandmother, an invalid, Gary, a man managing the finances. At twenty, the thought of marriage greatly frightened Deborah. She had planned that Deborah meet Stuart in Frisco, where they were to be married.

CHAPTER II.—Tubby and Bryn await Deborah in a hotel in Frisco. Over a period of one year, the groom is to prove he is no fortune hunter and can support her. Deborah is happy to the satisfaction of her grandmother that her fortune is to go to charity. The will is somewhat ambiguous as to whom Deborah may marry. The girl arrives with Holworthy, Tubby's friend, and her charming and sweet, but slightly bewildered, The wedding over, the couple arrived at the home of Deborah's grandmother, and Bryn, who she believed to be Stuart, take to one another, which somewhat displeases Deborah, who foresees difficulty when they are to separate.

CHAPTER III.—Deborah remonstrates with Bryn for his familiarity with her and his desire to marry her. Deborah's grandmother, Bryn declares, he is sincere. Deborah believes Bryn is a sweetheart waiting for him. Grandmother, who she believed to be Stuart, takes to one another, which somewhat displeases Deborah, who foresees difficulty when they are to separate.

CHAPTER IV.—Bryn takes Grandmother's opinion. He induces her to call him Bryn. Grandmother is content, and Bryn buys candy and a dog for Deborah.

CHAPTER V.—Deborah is displeased over Bryn's giving her gifts. While repairing the electric plant, Bryn falls in love with Deborah. She is very attractive. When Deborah pleads with him not to do it, he attempts to take her hand, and she flees. While strolling in the hills, Bryn, like Madeline, is unhappy. Grandmother is constantly pointing out Bryn's thoughtlessness.

Bryn considered, whistling softly, his eyes began to sparkle. Tubby, seeing them, reached across the writing table for paper and a pen. He wrote a note. He sealed it in an envelope. He addressed it to Mrs. Simon Valentine, at Hillsborough, California. "There," he said. "They're dying to come, anyway. So are a good many other people, as far as that goes."

When Bryn went downstairs next morning, there was apparently no one awake in the big house. Gary and Deborah were sure to be up, but they were not in sight. He stood for a moment on the top step, breathing in the fresh cool air, and then went around the house and down the brook toward the bridge, on his way to the engine house.

He had filled the gasoline tank in the engine and was rinsing his hands in the icy brook water when he heard a footstep on the bridge and looked up to see Deborah approaching. He stood up and dried his hands on his handkerchief. She came to stand a little above him on the raised plank, looking down at him. To his surprise, the strain of yesterday had not set a greater coldness toward him in her dark eyes. She was smiling a little at him now, her lips curving. She was smiling at him, and Deborah was not watching. She stared at her. "I followed you because I want to talk to you, if you don't mind," she said.

"Why, of course I don't mind. Is there something I can do?"

She hesitated, when he looked up, the long lashes had dropped and lay close to her cheek. She began to examine the moss, too. "I'm not a very nice person," she said at last. I apologized once before for being so difficult, but I don't think I tried any harder not to be difficult. I mean it this time. You were awfully thoughtful, last night, when Grandmother was so queer and afraid. You do love her, don't you? You're quite honest about it? You would do anything to spare her pain?"

"Yes."

She nodded. "I can see that. I don't think I quite believed it until yesterday afternoon, when you came home again, and last night, when you were so troubled. I've been very selfish. I've been thinking of myself all the time, and feeling trapped, and hating it. I haven't been half as thoughtful of Grandmother as you have. I've demanded things for myself more than for her, thought about myself first, and what . . . what my position was. You haven't thought about yourself once. You haven't complained. And this isn't your problem, after all, and yet you've put yourself into such a position that if anything went wrong, you would lose most. You signed the note for Mr. Holworthy, and assumed all the financial responsibility, and you've given me your name. I didn't quite see it all until Tubby came yesterday. And he talked about your friends and then we went on and nearly ruined everything, and suddenly I saw how dreadfully unfair that would be for you, and how horrid I've been." She looked at him gravely. "Will you forgive me?"

"You haven't been horrid, Deborah. You've been" Bryn began and caught himself in time. But she did not notice.

"Yes, I have. You don't know all the things that have been going on in my mind. I'm sorry." She put her soft hand out, momentarily, and patted his, lying on the railing. Bryn did not move.

"Bryn,"

"Yes, D . . . Deborah."

"Grandmother is in a strange state of mind. Last night I was very worried. I went into her room to tuck her up and kiss her good-night. She looked up at me directly and asked me if I were happy. She hasn't asked me before. Not in the same way. I think she began to suspect everybody, even me."

"Did you tell her you were happy?"

"Yes. But . . . she's going to be watching very closely for proof." She stopped. The color began to rise under her white skin. Bryn watched it, bewitched. Her eyes were lowered.

"What . . . what are we going to do about it?" he asked, lost.

"Happy with you," Deborah explained, as if he did not understand. "Does she think I'm in love with you?"

"Yes," Deborah replied, and flushed violently. "You're a much better actor than I am. I'm sure she's beginning to suspect me."

"When you go out the door," Bryn explained, "I stand and look after you. And when I hear you coming I go to meet you. And when you're talking I keep looking at you, and when you're away I talk to her about you. I tell her how beautiful you are, how much more beautiful than any girl I ever knew, with those lovely eyes, and your lashes, as long as a dream, and your mouth, and your little white chin, and the way you blush . . . and your throat, so soft and white, and the way you move your shoulders, and the color of your hair, and the way it curves." He drew a deep breath.

"Oh, dear," she sighed. "No wonder she thinks I'm not in love with you. I haven't told her once anything about you. I've hardly mentioned you."

"Well," Bryn said after a moment, "I'll tell you. When you're in love, Deborah, you hate to be away from you . . . from your sweetheart for a second. Everything she does is perfect and lovely and sweet. You want to lift her in your arms and hold her tight against you, so close that you can hear her heart beating. You want to hear her say that she'll never leave you again, no matter what happens, that she doesn't care anything about anybody else in the world but you. And if it happened that she didn't love you," Bryn went on slowly, "there'd be a sick empty feeling where your heart ought to be, and you'd wish you were a kid again, so you could cry. But if she did love you, and she knew you weren't sure about her, she'd put her arms around you, and put her cheek against yours, and maybe even . . . kiss you."

Deborah was staring at him. After a moment she said breathlessly, "Is that the way you love your . . . your own girl?"

"Yes, Deborah."

"I don't know anything about that way of loving," she said at last. "But she is very attractive." She was silent again. Then, "If you like them, Deborah, and find them pleasant company, what is it that has been troubling you ever since they arrived?"

"Troubling me?" Deborah answered, startled. "But . . . I am not troubled."

"Oh, Deborah," Grandmother said reproachfully.

Deborah raised her eyes, and there was a deep, happy smile in them.

"I am happy, Grandmother darling," she said.

"And you love Bryn? He loves you, of that I am sure. But of you love for him . . . sometimes I am not so sure. You admire him? You think him strong and thoughtful and quiet, and kind?"

"Yes, Grandmother."

"You respect him? You are proud of whatever he does?"

"Yes, Grandmother."

"And," she put her hand out, gently and lifted Deborah's chin. "Why, you are blushing, child! Surely that ought to be sufficient answer to my next question, but I must have your words, Deborah. Forgive me. But you know your complete happiness means everything to me. Deborah, tell me; when you see him, and he smiles that twinkling smile of his, don't you want to go to him, and caress his cheek, as you are caressing mine, and put your hand on his hair, and touch his shoulder? Isn't that what you'd like to do, Deborah?"

Deborah caught her breath. Her eyes darkened. Her lips quivered faintly. And then, "Yes, Grandmother," she said.

"Of course," Grandmother said happily. "Well, then you love him. You couldn't help loving him. Go, my child. Kiss me good-night, and leave me, I shall rest, tonight. I am happy."

Out in the hall, safely away from the door, Deborah stood and put both her hands over her face. Her brain was whirling. There was a dreadful lump in her throat, and something ached in her breast. Alone in the darkness, she stood, trying to calm herself, trying to be cool and unerring again.

A voice spoke to her. It was Bryn. He was in the hall beside her. He was whispering, so as not to disturb Grandmother.

"Deborah," he was saying anxiously, "Deborah, what has happened?"

Deborah did not answer. Instead, she dropped her hands and stared up through the shadows at his face. He drew a quiet breath, then put his arms out and held her close to him. His coat was rough under her cheek.

"Deborah, sweetheart," he said brokenly, "what's happened to you? Why are you trembling?"

For only a second she lay there, and then she lifted her head and pulled herself away. "Don't touch me," she said in a furiously whisper. "Oh, don't you dare to touch me!" and she flew down the stairs and out to the others, sitting talking in the welcome darkness of the veranda.

Deborah sat on the couch before the long balcony window in her own sitting room. The afternoon was very hot. Bryn and Tubby and Simon had gone following the brook, looking for a pool to swim in.

There was a knock at her door. Deborah ran quick fingers over her eyes. Her heart bumped. She scrambled from the couch, preparing to dash into her bedroom before calling out to Bryn that he might go through to his own room. It was not Bryn. Sally's voice floated plaintively through the keyhole. "Deborah! May we come in?"

"Oh," Deborah said limply, and then, "Yes, of course, Sally. Please do. And she tightened her dressing gown around her.

Sally, in floating black chiffon pyjamas and tiny black mules, came through the door, followed by Madeline in dull green. "Were you sleeping?" Sally inquired. "Curl yourself up again, Deborah. Everything about you is like the Sleeping Beauty herself," Sally said.

Deborah looked at Sally. "I think you're sweet, too, Sally," she said shyly. Sally flew up from her chair, flung her arms around Deborah and kissed her. "That was darling," she said. "Wasn't that darling, Madeline?"

Madeline sighed. "Yes," she agreed. "But you don't need it. You've got Simon. You don't have to suffer in silence and alone, as I do."

Sally began to laugh. "You don't exactly go around languishing, you know, idiot," she said.

Madeline sighed. "Not outwardly, perhaps, but inwardly, I suffer."

"Piffle," Sally answered. "She turned to Deborah. "Does she look as if she were suffering?"

"Not exactly," Deborah said faintly. "She isn't, either. She knows perfectly well it's all a question of time. And I must say, Madeline, it looks much more hopeful lately than it ever did. Doesn't it?"

Deborah couldn't stand it any longer. "Does she mean she's . . . in love . . . with somebody?" she asked faintly.

"Tubby," Sally answered. "Can you imagine it?"

"Tubby. Isn't it ridiculous?"

"I don't see anything ridiculous about it!" Madeline objected. "He may not be what one would call a romantic figure, I admit. He is a number of pounds overweight, but he's very good-tempered. And his hair won't lie flat; but I always liked originality. And I like his dimples and I'm crazy about his lips. I could listen to him forever, if only he'd say a few of the right things. Deborah, honestly now, don't you think Tubby's a dear?"

Deborah was still staring at her. Now she gave a deep sigh and sank back against the couch. "Yes," she said. "Yes, I think he's wonderful! I think he's marvelous. He put out his hand and took the letter from Tubby's. He glanced at it. He looked over at Deborah.

"He could be arrested for this," he told Deborah grimly. "Interfering with government mail, bribery and corruption. The crooked game of politics."

CHAPTER VIII

It had been a happy afternoon, the happiest afternoon, Deborah decided, that she had ever known. The four of them, Sally and Simon and she and Bryn, had gone for a walk in the pine woods up on the hill. At first she had walked beside Sally, but Sally had obviously wanted to be with Simon, and Deborah had dropped back and walked with Bryn. He could see how it was, that she wasn't thrusting herself upon him, that it was a matter of necessity, and he didn't seem to mind.

As a matter of fact, Deborah said to herself, sitting on the veranda in the twilight, he had seemed to enjoy himself.

He had climbed a steep overhanging little cliff once when she had seen a brilliant tiger-lily up in the shadow, and had brought it down to her triumphantly. When he gave it to her, her hands had touched, and he had stood for a moment looking down at her with a queer expression that made her heart turn over when she remembered. She had wanted to smile at him then, Deborah recalled, but something had made her draw away faintly, and as she moved, his expression had changed again, and he had begun to talk quickly.

Deborah could not take her eyes from Bryn's. It seemed to her that in his there was a question that she had to answer. She gazed at him, so strong and fine, sitting there against the pillar. A kind of tense look that was constantly in his face during these last few days began to relax. Then he put his hand slowly and covered hers, lying beside her on the chair.

"No, no," she said in a whisper, but she couldn't draw her hand away, and she didn't know what it was she meant.

He lifted her hand gently until it was against his lips; his eyes were still on hers, gentle, compelling. But she was afraid; she drew her hand away swiftly and sprang from her chair. "Isn't that . . . isn't that the sort?" she said breathlessly.

It was just kidding him, Deborah murmured, laughing. "You two keep me in a perfect state of bewilderment. I don't suppose I shall ever be able to tell whether you are inking sense or nonsense."

"Tubby's fault," Bryn answered, thrusting the letter into his pocket. "Tubby's an awful was, Grandmother. You have no idea."

"It's all right," Simon explained. "He smells the dinner. We're going to have duck and watercress."

Deborah stood tensely before the window, hands locked together, waiting for Bryn to come downstairs after taking Grandmother up to bed. Tonight of all nights, Grandmother had stayed up half an hour later, and all the time Stuart Graham's letter, filled with all sorts of unimaginable possibilities, lay unopened in Bryn's pocket.

Bryb came in quickly, and shut the door behind him. Deborah broke away from Madeline's arm. She took a step toward him. She put her hand out mutely.

His eyes were upon her face. He compressed his lips. His hand went to an inner pocket, and then he said, quietly, "Just a minute, Deborah. Are you perfectly sure that you're not mistaken?"

"Oh, yes, yes!" she cried, and the air in the room was suddenly electric.

As someone had turned a switch.

Bryb drew the letter out. He looked at it. "I don't like opening other people's letters," he said slowly. "It might be only an extraordinary resemblance, Deborah. You've had it on your mind, you know."

She took it from his hand and looked at it. The very touch of the envelope made her shiver. "I'm sure," she said.

Bryb ripped the end off the envelope, and drew out the folded pages. He glanced at Deborah's face. "Shall I read it, Deborah?"

She nodded mutely. Bryn straightened the pages and began.

"My Dear Mrs. Larned:

Naturally I cannot imagine just what Deborah has told you regarding the failure of our plans in San Francisco, but I am afraid she may not have shown me in a kindly light. For the past month I have been most anxious to write and explain the situation to you, but circumstances beyond my control have made it impossible for me to do so.

I suppose it is useless for me to expect that after hearing Deborah's story, whatever it was, and after this long silence on my part, you can have any sympathy for me and my position in which I now find myself. But I must ask you to accept my explanation which I have made in respect to my silence in view of the fact that I am a enlisted man in the navy, completely under the arbitrary control of any whim of my superior officers and subject to the restrictions of anyone on board a ship out of touch with land and such conveniences as mail.

As for now, for Deborah's story, what she has told you, I do not know, as I mentioned before, being, as it were, no matter from her point of view, and trying to be just and generous. I am forced to the conclusion that whatever she told you must have been both exaggerated and biased. I was very much disturbed over the whole business, and spent all my spare time leaving in San Francisco to find her and explain, but of course I was unable to do so.

I don't know whether it is possible to do so, I am ignorant of the world and its ways. Deborah is, I was prepared, of course, for a certain amount of unorthodox, knowing to some extent how she had been brought up, but I did not realize that any girl could possibly be so ignorant and age, have remained so entirely removed of all trends of modern times. I had, of course, every respect for the manners and customs of the time of my

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Unrest" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ Scientist, on Sunday, April 3.

The Golden Text was, "The world passeth away, and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever" (1 John 2:17).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Put not your trust in princes, nor in the son of man, in whom there is no help." His breath goeth forth; he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish. Happy is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help, whose hope is in the Lord his God" (Psalms 140:3-5).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The true idea of man, as the reflection of the Invisible God, is as incomprehensible to the limited senses as is man's infinite Principle. The visible universe and material man are the poor counterfeits of the invisible universe and spiritual man" (p. 337).

Misses Grace and Anna Drom, Mrs. Lillian Gaa and Mrs. Martha Hunter attended advanced officers night at the Grayslake O. E. S. Tuesday evening.

Don't forget the card party at St. Peter's hall, Monday evening, April 18, at 7:30. Bridge, "500", pinochle and bimbo. Admission 35c.

Franklin Feted in Paris

When Benjamin Franklin was in Paris in Revolutionary days seeking help for America, he received such ovations as the old Spartan had never dreamed of. Parties were given in his honor, at which the most beautiful women were chosen to embrace him in turn. No man of quality was complete without a ring or a snuff-box with his medallion. "These," he wrote to his daughter, "have made your father's face as well known as that of the moon, so that he durst not do anything that would oblige him to run away, as his phiz would discover him wherever he should venture to show it."

Age of Fables

That first century after the discovery of the New World by Columbus was the age of fables, when the Spanish conquistadores were obsessed with legends such as those of the "Island of Women" somewhere in the West, the great "Seven Cities" abounding in treasures and putting such a childlike faith in the most preposterous stories of fabulous treasures that no sooner did an Indian tell about coasts where pearls abounded or cities where gold and silver were used for the commonest purpose, than they fitted out an expedition to seek those treasures on the spot.

I hereby offer a reward of $100 for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the person fraudulently impersonating me in soliciting so-called "political campaign funds."

The purpose of this offer of reward is twofold: (1) to protect any person from making political contributions to a man who as late as this week represented himself on the telephone to be Congressman Church, thereby obtaining a check, and fraudulently endorsing and cashing same in my name; (2) to urge the cooperation of those approached in apprehending the guilty person with a view to prompt prosecution.

Repeated reports of such fraudulent solicitation drive me to this public offer of reward.

As late as Thursday, March 31st, a man telephoned a leading north side business man stating in effect: "I am Congressman Church, just off the plane from Washington. The Campaign Committee needs more money. I would like to send a man right over for a check. I want to go back to Washington tonight."

Note carefully that I have not been in Illinois since January 1, 1938. Vital legislative business has kept me in Washington. I have of course never authorized the use of my name by any so-called fund raising "campaign committee."

In my twenty years in public office I have always entirely paid my own campaign expense. I have never solicited campaign contributions and have returned every contribution which has been sent me.

Will those who have contributed to this person who is falsely impersonating me write me direct or cooperate with my law partner, Dean Lake Traxler, 10 South LaSalle Street, Chicago, furnishing him with the details?

Professor Seeks Proof They Crossed Bering Strait.

Edmonton, Alta.—Seeking to solve the problem of who were the original inhabitants of the North American continent, Prof. W. L. Bliss of the University of New Mexico, visited Edmonton to confer with Dr. J. A. Allen, head of the University of Alberta geology department, and to gather data on his theory that North American races originally came from Asia by crossing the Bering strait and traveling south through Alberta.

Dr. Bliss hopes to find many links for this theory in a study of Alberta province and the MacKenzie river valley. He contends that there have been no reasons to suppose that the first people originated there and then. "It is generally accepted that American cultures are the result of a number of migrations from Asia."

The professor bases his theory on the fact that the Bering strait is only 80 miles wide at one point and 30 fathoms deep. Geological history has indicated that the two continents broke away at this point and sank into the sea, erasing the land bridge.

Proof that the original habitation of this continent was Asiatic is confirmed by discoveries of Oriental carvings in Mexico and the southwestern states. The Indians' physical resemblance to Asiatics and the distribution of languages in North America has led Bliss to believe that they spread out in a fanlike direction south and east from Alaska.

Anthropologists further believe that migrations from Asia came at different periods. Investigations reveal a certain type of Pueblo Indian that possessed a narrow head, and another type with a round head, hinting at a possibility of more than one migration. According to anthropologists, man has lived on this continent for more than 12,000 years.

Dr. Bliss has spent many years on research both in America and Asia. When his investigations are completed here, accompanied by Dr. Allen and A. Haynes, University of New Mexico student, he will continue northward along the MacKenzie river into Alaska.

Spinning Wheel Earns

Living for This Family

Rushmore, Minn.—Mrs. Martha Odens, who carded her first pound of wool when she was eleven years old, is in favor of the old spinning wheel.

She still follows the pattern of grandmother's day, and earns a comfortable living for herself and children by carding and spinning wool, which she knits into a variety of articles. Her market, she says, reaches as far as Illinois. Her output last year, she said, included washing and carding the wool for 11 comforters, 118 pairs of mittens, and 18 sweaters, all of which she knits herself. In her spare time she finds leisure to crochet lace and insertions for pillow cases, and fancy tops for sofa pillows.

Mrs. Odens' first tutor was her grandmother, who acquired the art in her native Germany. The wheel she now operates was purchased for her by her late husband 21 years after she had "worn out" the one she had used for years previous to that time.

Nazi Ancestor Worship
Is Spreading in Germany

Berlin.—Ancestor worship such as that practiced by the Japanese and Chinese has appeared in Germany along the Baltic sea coast, notably in Mecklenburg, which has become the center of extreme Germanism and neopagan experimentation.

The head of the National Socialist party in Mecklenburg has ordered that unused chapels be transformed into "ancestral halls." Here ancestral tablets will be placed, containing the names and symbols of families in the vicinity.

A regional cultural director of the party recently dedicated such an ancestral chapel. It was decorated with a swastika and the ceremony opened with a Chopin prelude. The party official delivered an address and then "received into the community of all Germans" six children of a local family.

Like ceremonies are taking the place of Christian marriage and baptism in coast villages.

Britain Opens Fattening School for Its Recruits

London.—A new "fattening school" for British army recruits, rejected as unfit, is to be started in Canterbury as a result of the success achieved by an experimental one at Aldershot.

The Aldershot school opened with 200 flat-chested, undernourished men. They were put on a diet of fresh fruit, fresh milk and barley sugar. With fresh air and light exercise they put on an average of six pounds in weight and one inch in chest measurement in six weeks. Today the depot is turning out "reclaimed" men for the army at the rate of one a day.

Locomotive Has No Rivals

Albany.—A locomotive with a fusion-welded boiler—the first of its kind ever constructed—has been placed in service by the Delaware & Hudson railroad.

Thought Without Language
Language in its broadest sense is any means of expressing thought, so that a dog which barks to attract attention or wags his tail to show pleasure is putting his thought into language. There is a common saying that a thought may be too deep to be put into words. Infants who have not yet learned to talk have their own way of expressing their thoughts. In general it may be said that language is absolutely necessary for any depth of thought. Samuel Johnson said "Language is the dress of thought" and Carlyle said "Language is the flesh-garment, the body of thought."The "Big Stick"
"Speak softly and carry a big stick, you will go far," is a West African proverb. Theodore Roosevelt popularized it. It became a sort of slogan to describe his strong foreign policy and his advocacy of military and naval preparedness. He used it in an address on September 2, 1901, at the Minnesota state fair, when he said: "There is a homely old adage which runs: 'Speak softly and carry a big stick; You will go far.' If the American nation will speak softly and yet build and keep at a pitch of the highest training a thoroughly efficient navy, the Monroe doctrine will go far."Story of St. Francis
Medieval faith was enthused with the childlike simplicity of those days, as the famous story of St. Francis and the peasant well exemplifies: "Art thou Brother Francis of Assisi?" asks the peasant. "Yes." "Then try to be as good as all people think thee to be," continues the peasant, "because many have faith in thee, and therefore I admonish thee to be nothing less than people hope of thee."Meaning of Name Bonita
The name Bonita, diminutive of the Latin Bona "good," means "good little girl." Bona is not much used but was formerly the name of royal ladies of Italy and Flanders. There was a Queen Bona or Bonne of France many years ago. St. Bonita was French. Bonnie may be a form of Bona or it may be Gaelic. In the latter case it means "pretty."Pioneer Educational Magazine
The pioneer educational magazine of America was the Academican, a small semi-weekly edited by Albert and John W. Pickett and published by the Incorporated Society of Teachers of New York. The first number appeared February 7, 1818.Won Prize for Clock
In 1713, the British government offered $100,000 to any one who could make a clock that would not lose more than three seconds a day. The prize was collected some years later by a clockmaker named Harison.

Keller's Record

for Re-ElectionMany Groups Favor Return of Lake County Man to Springfield

Newly elected members of the state legislature are supposed to be "seen and not heard," but Nick Keller, Republican, of Waukegan, state representative from the Eighth Senatorial district, who is now completing his first term, refused to be bound by precedent.

Nick fathered a number of important measures, engaged in debates on the more important bills, took a prominent part in several momentous conferences and was a factor in the deliberations of the committees of the house of which he is a member.

Included in the bills entered by Representative Keller was one providing for grade separations on all state and national highways, and adequate railroad crossing protection and another, providing for additional farms to market highwayways.

Endorsed by Many Interests
His support of educational measures in the house earned him the praise of the Illinois Education association. After thanking Representative Keller for his support of all public education bills, R. C. Moore, executive secretary of the association, wrote:

"It was also evident that you studied all school measures with an open mind and gave strict attention to your committee work and the debates on the floor of the house.

"I hope your constituents will keep you in the General Assembly as long as you care to serve them and that you will continue to give to the schools the excellent service you gave this year."

The early influence attained by Representative Keller in the house is indicated by the important committee assignments given him in his first term. The committees on which he has a membership and in the deliberations of which he took an active part are: revenue, railroads and aviation, waterways, conservation, fish and game, liquor regulation, efficiency and economy and senatorial apportionment. It is an imposing list of committees for a new member.

War Veteran

Nick, a lifelong resident of the district and a descendant of a pioneer Lake county agricultural family, served from 1923 to 1931 as commissioner of public works in Waukegan. This was during Waukegan's greatest period of development.

A veteran of the world war, he also served as a member of the U. S. Naval Reserve for 16 years.

Owner and manager of the Seven Keller Brothers Poultry farm and proprietor of Keller's restaurant on Sheridan road near Zion, Mr. Keller is also a baseball scout on the rolls of the St. Paul club of the American association, affiliated with the Chicago White Sox. He likewise has been prominent in athletic promotion work in Lake county for 20 years.

The "right wing" in connection with politics is the conservative element, or, as in Europe, it is often the monarchist element in a political party, legislature, parliament and so on. The "left wing" is made up of the more radical element of a political party or legislature.

Fox Lake, Ill.—Revenge for last year's massacre will be in the minds of Barrington's track and field squad when they run out on their home track Wednesday afternoon to entertain Grant's cinder men in the season's inaugural for the latter. Last April 27 the Red and White Raiders accorded the Bronchos a painful 89-33 blistering.

A pre-season survey of Barrington's talent does not chill the spines of any local track followers. The Bronchos, although generally an enormous squad, are not well-balanced and rarely present an outstanding individual performer. Robert Cadwallader, Barrington's great shot putter of last spring and a few years back, is about the only exception of the above statement.

Reports reveal Barrington has a host of letter men from last year. However, their performances against Grant last spring were not exactly satisfactory.

No, this writer sees nothing on the horizon but an impressive Grant victory.

The melodious strains of Maestro Sherman Lade and his Rhythm Kings drifted over Renahan's Lodge at Round Lake Sunday evening as Representative Richard J. Lyons, United States Senator candidate, spoke before a host of jubilant Republican followers.

Mr. Lade and his erudite musicians are becoming unusually popular with Lake County students of swing and sway.

Senior class play practice has progressed into its second week. The cast has memorized the first act to the satisfaction of Director Hill, but the remaining two acts are quite a problem.

Eleanor Adams had the privilege of inaugurating the new series of impromptu speeches in the senior English class Tuesday morning.

Topics for discussion were selected by the students and Mr. Hill. The speaker then blindly drew a topic and spoke without preparation.

The G Club, an organization consisting of Grant lettermen, will entertain the student body Thursday afternoon with an assembly program. According to Coach Rasinke, comedians galore constitute this assemblage of athletes.

Grant high school will enter a first year typing team this spring in the Illinois State Commercial Contest, it was announced today by Louis A. Orr, the high school's commercial instructor. Mr. Orr is undecided as to the exact district center his typists will compete.

Four first year girls are working desperately for a team berth. They are Janice Pixley, Edna White, Arlene Toneyan, and Frances Seymour. Miss White and Miss Pixley are certainties for the team, Mr. Orr said. However, he is undecided as to his selection between Miss Toneyan and Miss Seymour.

The 1938 interclass track and field meet was climaxed late Tuesday evening. At the conclusion of the activities Coach Rasinke tabulated the results and found that the senior class had won the meet by virtue of their impressive 121 points.

The seniors had fourteen men participating in the show. The freshmen followed with eleven, and the sophomores and juniors had nine each. Because the seniors had the most athletes in the classic, they were awarded ten points for that feat alone.

The school will conduct its six weeks examinations next week, and then the entire student body will start to thunder down the home stretch—a stretch that will last six weeks.

The girls in a local college are reported to have protested against the untidy appearance of the male students. They accuse the boys of not pressing their trousers regularly, with the result that they hang like burlap sacks. Grant boys are no exceptions.

Lesson for April 10
FINDING OURSELVES
IN SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 8:37-33.
GOLDEN TEXT—"What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"—Mark 8:35.
PRIMARY TOPIC—What Peter Found Out.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—
Making Life Count Through Service.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—
Finding the Richest Life Through Service.

"Finding ourselves" seems like a singular, almost self-contradictory expression, but it refers to a sound principle recognized by psychologists as well as spiritual leaders. As a matter of fact, modern psychology has begun to recognize and use spiritual laws and principles which alone bring about human happiness and efficiency.

A word of warning—let no one who studies this lesson fall into the serious error of thinking that some formal religious service will bring redemption and favor with God. We are saved by grace through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ—"not of works, lest any man should boast." It is then by the new birth that we are "created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them" (Eph. 2:8-10).

It is the Christian who needs to "find himself in service." Only as he thus yields to Christ does he really find the life worth living. The words of Jesus in verse 35 are solemnly and gloriously true.

I. Clear Confession (vv. 27-30).

Even those who deny to our Christ the recognition of His deity, and the devotion of life which is His just due, must, if they are at all intelligent, admit that no man ever lived who has made such an impact on human history. Even in the days of his life on earth those who did not accept Him as Christ regarded Him as the resurrected form of one of the nation's greatest leaders. Now unbelieving men speak of Him as the great founder of Christianity, a mighty leader, a wonderful example, or an unequalled teacher.

It is not enough that we stand with the mass of humanity who may thus admire Him, but who do not count Him as Saviour and Lord. The question comes to us as it did to the disciples, "Whom say ye that I am?" "Thou art the Christ!"—this alone suffices as the foundation for Christian testimony and conduct.

II. Corrected Error (vv. 31-33).

Although Jesus was not yet ready to have His Messiahship proclaimed to the public, He was prepared to teach His disciples concerning not only that important truth, but of His rejection and death. "He began to teach them that the Son of man must suffer . . . be rejected . . . killed and . . . rise again."

Note the divine "must." While it is true that wicked men showed their hostility toward our God and His Christ by hanging Him on Calvary's cross, yet it was to die for our sins that He came into the world. The cross has rightly come to represent God's love to the world rather than man's hostility to God.

Error now asserts itself, and strangely enough it is the very one who had the clearest grasp of the truth regarding the Messiahship of Christ and boldly expressed it who now objects to the revelation of the coming death and resurrection of Christ, and lends his voice to rebuke the Master for speaking of it.

Satan hates the cross and the open grave. Jesus won the victory over him there. He did not want to hear of it before it took place and used impulsive Peter for a mouthpiece to object. He doesn't want to hear about it now and uses many a skillful and gifted preacher to speak against it. "The offense of the cross" (Gal. 5:11) has never ceased.

III. Consecrated Life and Service (vv. 34-38).

"Let him deny himself" (v. 34). That command we have construed to mean that we should perform little acts of self-denial, foregoing some comfort or pleasure, possibly for a few weeks. It does not mean that at all—but does mean the renouncing of self and self-will, and a complete yielding to God's will. Likewise, to take up one's cross does not mean to bear some of life's little disagreeable experiences; it means again to die to self and to live for Christ.

Careful attention should be given to the solemn questions asked and statements made in verses 35-37. These are not the reasonings of a man—they fall from the lips of the Son of God. What, He asks, will you give in exchange for your soul?

Payment

How little we pay our way in life! Although we have our purses continually in our hand, the better part of service goes still unrewarded.

Discussion

The more discussion the better, if passion and personalities be eschewed.

Pain

Pain is in itself a sharp discipline and hard to bear.

Scientists Measure
And Control Vitamins
For Modern Chickens

Gray Summit, Mo.—Few things are conspicuous by their absence. But vitamins are among the few that are, since a great deal of vitamin knowledge has been brought about by showing what happens when vitamins are not present. Here at the Purina Experimental Farm thousands of tests have been run on poultry of all ages. Sometimes an abundance of vitamins have been included. Other times feeds lacking in vitamins have been fed. These experiments have disclosed some interesting nutritional facts. Weak legs, poor feathering, retarded growth, bronchial troubles, poor pigmentation, lowered production disease and infection have all been accounted for by lack of the proper vitamins in poultry feed.

Poultry Need Vitamins

The most important vitamins in poultry feeding are Vitamin A, D, and G. They are most important because they are most likely to be present in sufficient amounts to promote growth and health.

The process of counting or measuring vitamins is a tedious and expensive one and only feed manufacturers equipped with complete biological laboratories, trained scientists, and plenty of animals to experiment with can make commercial use of the present-day knowledge of vitamins.

Vitamin Control New

Vitamin control in poultry feeds is relatively new. Vitamins were discovered about 22 years ago, but most of the usable knowledge about them has come to the front since 1922. In 1933 Purina scientists were able to announce that a new Vitamin A concentrate had been discovered and could be efficiently and economically added to poultry feeds to improve livability, growth, pigmentation, and laying. Purina laying mashes were stepped up 2½ times in Vitamin A content by the addition of Puratene, which contains Carotene, the vegetable form of Vitamin A.

Vitamin A can now be measured through a machine called the "spectrophotometer."

Vitamin A Essential

Vitamin A is needed by baby chicks, growing pullets, and layers. Especially do laying hens need plenty of Vitamin A to keep up production through winter months. Abundance of Vitamin A in the laying mash prevents breakdown among birds and cuts mortality among the flock. Pullets that have been grown out on a feed containing sufficient amounts of Vitamin A go into the laying house with strong, well-developed bodies and are able to keep up heavy production without breakdown and turn into extra profits for their owner.

Vitamin D is the sunshine vitamin, is absolutely necessary if hens are kept indoors. For baby chicks as much as 30 units of Vitamin D per every 100 grams of feed must be given for proper bone development and growth. The best known source of Vitamin D for poultry feeds is cod liver oil, the same source recommended for humans. The finest Potency of cod liver oil is measured through assay tests on live animals.

Vitamin G Now Added

Most recent of the vitamin discoveries is Vitamin G, which plays an important part in hatchability. Purina laying and breeding mashes contain a sufficient amount of Vitamin G to cut down losses from eggs that don't hatch. Vitamin G is measured in the Purina Laboratories by use of a new instrument, the Flavometer. This instrument was developed by two Purina scientists and is used to determine the Vitamin G content in feed.

Gray Summit, Mo.—Five years ago Purina Research men began a series of tests to learn how a cow should be conditioned during the dry period for easier calving. In working on this problem related discoveries of even greater importance were made. It was found that cows conditioned for easier calving through experimental management and feeding methods increased their milk flow from 10 to 25 percent the following lactation period. The result is today's dry cow program recommended by all Purina feed merchants.

International Relations

MANY eminent people in the political and economic spheres have for years been endeavoring to place before a waiting and anxious world constructive ideas for establishing friendly international relations on a secure and practical basis. But, so far, none of the material methods which have been experimented with have succeeded in breaking down the fear of aggression, or the thoughts of bitterness in the human heart. That these fundamental errors need to be overcome is certain, if the world is to experience the lasting peace and prosperity which humanity has so long desired.

Since the knowledge that God, divine Love, is indeed the Father of all, foreshadows the gloriously illuminating passage, it is not impracticable, but divinely potent and natural. This broader realization of true brotherhood, wherein each one seeks his own progress in the good of another, because all are brethren, will in due course solve every national and international problem relating to frontiers, colonies, and economic supplies.

When in a human family there are discontent, lack of affection, and a general disregard for the progress and welfare of each member, it is easy to see that the whole structure of that family's success and well-being is liable to totter. Selfishness and joylessness have undesirable effects on health and happiness. But if one and all have a common basis for true affection and selfless service, the family will prosper, and will steadily increase in health, freedom, and tranquility.

Some may say that love is all very well, in its very intimate place between friends and relatives, but of what effectual use is it between nations? Further, it is sometimes argued that ideals, ambitions, and characteristics vary so widely in each country, that it is impossible for even the closest neighbor to understand another nation's differing needs and aims, and how to deal with them.

But are we not conclusively told that love, understood in its relation to Love, God, can overcome all barriers, and form that lasting link necessary for world peace? It is the unselfish desires and united aims of men which break down the temporary obstacles of language and material tradition. In the first century of the Christian era Paul discerned this fact, for he wrote, "Whether there be prophecies, they shall fail; whether there be tongues, they shall cease; whether there be knowledge, it shall vanish away." But "charity (love) never faileth" (1 Corinthians 13:8).

Mary Baker Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, writes on page 340 of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures": "One induces God, good, unites men and nations; constitutes the brotherhood of man; ends wars; fulfills the Scripture, 'Love thy neighbor as thyself'; annihilates pain and Christian

The Name Ada

The name Ada, from the Teutonic, means "happy." Besides its auspicious meaning, the name has much to command it; being of pleasing sound and so short that it cannot be "nickled." There is also a Hebrew name, Adah, meaning "ornament" or "beauty," but it is not often given. St. Ada, Seventh century abbess, gave to the monastery of St. Mesmin a book written with letters of gold.

Early Use of Marble Table Tops

From Elizabethan England come records of marble table tops in 1588, although it was not until the early part of the Eighteenth century that marble appeared as an important furnishing feature in England. Their use in Italy most probably predates this, since the natural resources there and the architectural character of the furniture would both encourage the use of marble.

Fear Salpeter Spots

When salpeter forms on the damp walls of a home in Palestine, many peasants believe that the house itself has contracted leprosy, says Collier's Weekly, and should be vacated and shunned until its "spots" have disappeared, a superstition which has prevailed in that country for nearly 3,500 years.

Jefferson Avoided Formalities

Thomas Jefferson, having an aversion to formalities, frequently received distinguished guests while clad in dressing gown and slippers.

Young Coats Styled to Perfection

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHETHER she has attained the ripe old age of four years or is tottering on the verge of her teens, this year's smart members of the younger set will find that their new wool coats for spring reflect the same interesting fashion trends as those of their chic mamas. With the new vogue for soft tailoring which is important throughout the whole spring picture, fine lightweight woolens—notably the lustrous chevrons, smooth tailor-minded worsteds and fine men's wear flannels in the very popular navy blue, also the now-so-modish neutral shades plus a long list of beguiling pastels—are designed on cunning flattering lines such as you see here pictured.

In tune with the dressmaker styling which prevails in this season's tailored wear, the newer wool coats are cut on lines that are anything but severe. Smart princess silhouettes, so charmingly adaptable to childish figures, are to be found in double-breasted models with lapels of boyish cut or in high-necked single-breasted types with snug round collars.

Important for trimming detail is the use of pliable colored leather which may be either in suede or smooth finish. The adorable youngster centered in the foreground of the illustration has on as fetching a leather-trimmed coat as you will see anywhere in the spring style parade. For this attractive double-breasted model stitched leather at the neck and pockets provides a smart red accent to red-sleeked neutral wool tweed.

A leather-trimmed coat is also shown to the right in the group. The leather, smooth in finish and all-over stitched, is charming in a

VELVET TRIMMINGS SPRING FAVORITE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Marie Antoinette and Madame Pompadour are the inspiration for the new velvet accents. It is from them that the bows, the ribbons and the velvet trimmings of all types that are so popular this spring stem. The tercentenary of the birth of Louis XVI will be recalled in France this spring, and unless all plans go awry, many of the famous fêtes of his reign will be re-enacted. Maria Theresa entered Paris in 1700. This will probably have its effect on fall fashions and we will see a perpetuation of a fad that will then become a fashion.

Certainly a velvet collar on a suit, velvet bows or velvet bodices, velvet ribbon-trimmed flounces, make interesting details.

Millinery is again millinery, and velvet ribbons, flowers, crowns, brims, as well as bonnets, cloches, tiny berets and turbans always flourish when women are wearing "hats as is hats."

Reds and Corals Lead in Colors in New Fashions

The gamut of geranium reds and coral tones, shading into pale blotting paper pink, take first place in colors shown in one French collection recently. The prominence of pink is even noticeable in tartans, in which soft tones of pink are combined with vivid green or yellow. Purples, fuchsia red and soft "fay" blues are given importance, and the burnt tones from ochre yellow to brick red are emphasized. New greens are confined to turquoise shades.

Color Galleries Hat

Color rises as colorful hats become more and more popular. A pill-box of deep ruby velvet has its cuff trimmed with tiny hummingbirds in green and blue.

The peasant scarf is being tied on the heads of even the youngest in the fashion parade, as a highly entertained audience learned that attended one of the series of break-fast clinics presented in the Merchandise Mart of Chicago. The style show given at this meets for juvenile fashions was unique in that forty or more youngsters served as mannequins, ranging from a babe in arms to the teen age. The toddler here pictured wears a very practical and playful coverall in pottery shades. There is a clever use of decorative applique, a cactus motif. The fabric is cotton and easy for laundering. This cunning practical play outfit to be had in various colors.

SMART FOOTWEAR IS DICTUM FOR SPRING

Styles Reveal the Foot in New and Taking Ways.

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Spring trends in footgear indicate an "out and out" season for polished toes. Draped lines, dressier detail, ribbon effects knotted over instep and ankle, all contrive to reveal the foot in new and taking ways.

A gypsy sandal of printed challis combined with bright blue kidskin belongs to the tied-to-the-toe mode. A band of the kidskin crosses the foot just below the arch, and is finished with a bow of the print. Printed challis covers the heel and ties around the ankle in a second bow. Another shoe combines printed cotton with navy leather. Toenails are "in clover," a new polish shade that matches a color in the print.

Pale-toned lizard, ultra-new this year, is shown with leather straps, crossing in lattice effect down the top of the foot. Leather straps and bindings are in a darker color. Beige vies in popularity with pale beige, the new luggage shade. Polish to harmonize with the brownish tones is heather.

Another interesting departure in color is the gray shoe that "goes with everything," done in shades of gray from light to dark. Straps in different shades cross and re-cross over the instep. Softly draped folds crossing the toes are worked in leather almost as often as in crepe. In the majority of new models, open effects are not confined to toes alone, and the more varied the exposure of the foot, the more definitely is the shoe marked for 1938. If it doesn't look gay, it's an old-fashioned foot!

STRIPE JEWELRY

deep wine tone, as it gives accent to this new double-breasted coat for the eight-year-old. Smooth fitted lines with chic back flare are smartly highlighted by the leather facing on pockets and high rounded collar, with small matching wine colored composition buttons at the double-breasted front closing.

The use of velvetine facing in contrast shades is noted as an important style detail appearing not only on collar and cuffs but as decorative finishings on flap pockets and other interesting design features. Winsome for the six year old is a fitted princess coat as shown in the inset below to left. It is in a flattering shade of pink lightweight wool with new velvetine collar facing, matched to navy composition flower buttons at the front closing. Double V-shaped flaps on the high breast pockets are decorative and fashionable.

Bright plaid taffeta and other gay silk facings are used to enliven dark coats for the very young. Fitted and flared is the attractively tailored "town coat" in navy wool flannel pictured above to the left in the group. Plaid taffeta trims the collar and pocket flaps. The matching hat has a plaid taffeta bow at the front.

If it is a whole spring wardrobe in one, you would like to be purchasing for little daughter this spring, keep your eyes open for the fashionably cut four-piece suits now showing in children's apparel collections.

They have a long cape with box shoulders (too cunning for words) a collarless jacket and all-round pleated skirt and a matching hat. The little five-year-olds who wear them look like fashion plate youngsters. As to being practical Harvey offers endless changes and possibilities.

The rage for stripes extends into every nook and cranny of fashion-dom. Now it's our costume jewelry that has gone striped! The new Seminole-style costume jewelry is one of the cleverest adaptations of stripes we've seen. Inspired by the vivid stripes that are identified with the garb of the Seminole Indians, this jewelry gives that dramatic dash of color to the dark dress (equally effective with white and light colored frocks) that fashion declares must be this season. The various pieces, bracelet, brooch and clips, plus a girdle clasp that repeats the motif of the bracelet, depicts half-inch diagonal stripes of black, gold, orange, red, green and pink, lacquered on solid white catlinite. See its effectiveness as the brilliant stripes contrast the black daytime dress sketched above. The young woman in the oval inset varies the mode by wearing her catlinite stripe pieces, one clip in the hair, another on her bodice with wide bracelet to match.

Use Salt Deposits
Salt deposits not many miles east of Hot Springs National Park, Ark., are known to have been worked by the Indians before the early white settlers used them as a source of their salt. Numerous fragments of pottery found at these localities indicate the importance of earthy salts in the collecting of this valuable food substance.

Things That Cannot Be Seen
Many living things which are less than one, one-hundred-thousandth of an inch in diameter will never be seen distinctly by man, says Collier. Weekly, even through the most powerful compound microscope of the future, owing to the unalterable wave length of visible light.

Jackson's Last Words
The last words of President Andrew Jackson were: "I hope to meet each of you in heaven. Be good children, all of you, and strive to be ready when the change comes."

PUBLIC SERVICE SHOWS BIG GAIN FOR YEAR 1937

Net income of Public Service Company of Northern Illinois for 1937, after all charges and taxes, including surtax on undistributed profits, was $4,703,997, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to $5.53 a share on the outstanding common stock, according to the Company's Annual Report issued this week. These figures compare with net income of $3,739,330, or $4.16 a share on common stock, in the preceding year.

Total operating expenses for 1937 were $41,679,099 against $39,231,289 in 1936, or an increase of 6.2%.

Total operating expenses and taxes increased $1,868,000. The increase in operating expenses resulted chiefly from the cost of generating more kilowatt hours of electricity and from wage increases. Total tax provisions for 1937 amounted to $4,740,515, compared with $4,127,116 for 1936.

The Company in 1937 continued its aggressive sales promotion policy and, in addition to its own appliance sales, actively engaged in the promotion of sales by dealers.

Total kilowatt hours sales of electricity for the year increased approximately 7% over 1936. Electricity sold to residential and rural customers increased almost 14%. The average annual kilowatt hours consumption of electricity was 840 in 1937, compared with 762 in 1936, an increase of more than 10%. Total sales of gas last year amounted to 137,541,000 therms, compared with 105,500,000 therms in 1936, or an increase of 30%.

The Annual Report points out that although results for 1937 were satisfactory, the outlook for at least the first quarter of 1938 is less favorable. There has been a considerable slackening of industrial activity in the territory served by the Company, and furthermore, the Company must pay a 3% State public utility tax this year which was not in effect from January 1 to March 10, 1937. If the 3% tax had been in effect for the entire year of 1937, it would have increased the levy by about $260,000.

The Company serves 305,000 electric customers and 158,000 gas customers throughout a territory of approximately 6,000 square miles in the northeastern portion of Illinois outside of the city of Chicago. In this territory are a total of 347 communities served by the Company. 345 are furnished with electricity, 107 with gas, 4 with water and 2 with heat.

KELSEY FAVORS $5 LICENSE FEE FOR ALL ILLINOIS AUTOS

Pointing out that the Illinois motorists' poured about $50,000,000.00 into the state treasury last year, Harold D. Kelsey, State Representative of Lake County stated today that he intends to push a bill for the relief of motorists in the next session of the general assembly, if elected.

Kelsey is inclined to favor a flat rate of $5.00 for a license fee and intends to embody this in a bill to be presented at the next session. Although a Republican, Kelsey is certain of Democratic support along this line, for Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes, a Democrat, recently stated that something must be done to lighten the burden of the motorist. The bill the automobile owner is forced to pay is too great in the opinion of Secretary Hughes.

$5.00 a Fair Figure

Kelsey believes that a $5.00 license fee for all types of cars would be equitable. The lowest now is $6.50, not including a 50 cent fee for certificates of title.

Five dollars for a light car or a heavy car would be equitable in the opinion of Kelsey, because the heavier car would use more gasoline and thus make up the difference through paying more into the motor fuel-tax.

The automobile owner pays more than any other person to support the government in the state and nation. Last year his bill in Illinois was about $50,000,000.00, which according to figures presented by the Secretary of State, show it is more than one-third of the entire revenue received by the state, Kelsey said.

Funds Aplenty

The bill for gasoline tax, Kelsey declared, ranges close to $30,000,000.00, a sufficient sum in itself. The registration fees plus the motor fuel tax fund added to the federal aid will give the state nearly $50,000,000.00. Fines and other miscellaneous items will add another $250,000.00. This, in the opinion of Kelsey, is unreasonable, excessive and far out of proportion. The automobile owner, in his opinion, too long has been the target when revenues are needed and can almost claim discrimination in comparison with other items of taxation.

LEGISLATIVE RACE--

(continued from page 1) candidates in his home community two years ago, and who his friends say will repeat with even a greater showing this year; and Charles H. Francis, Woodstock lawyer, former representative, who has the endorsement of the Legislative Voters League.

Say Bolger Will Repeat

Basking in the favor of the Horner administration, Representative Thomas A. Bolger of McHenry is believed to head the list of eligibles on the Democratic primary ticket. Bolger's opponent in his home county is Charles F. Hayes, railroad man of Harvard, while the other four aspirants fall from Lake county. They are: Thomas J. Keefe, of Ingleside; Joseph H. Jadrach, North Chicago lawyer; Einar Sorenson, Antioch, and Edward T. Leonard of Lake Villa. Political opponents of Bolger are reported to be turning to the candidacy of Jadrach, who is prosecuting a vigorous campaign and who is said to have the support of the Kelly-Nash machine that seeks to extend its influence into Lake county. All things considered, it may be that Jadrach will muster a winning vote, but the old timers are inclined to believe that no opponent will be able to unseat the veteran Bolger, who like Francis, has the approval of the Legislative Voters League.

What of "The League"?

Whatever may be the influence of the Legislative Voters League endorsements in the coming primaries, it was pointed out today by a veteran politician that the League has been quite noted in the past for having endorsed losing candidates and having withheld approval of those who won. Notable among these are Representative Richard J. Lyons and Representative Nick Keller, neither of whom had the League's endorsement the first time they ran. Both were successful at the polls. After he was elected Lyons had the League's approval each successive campaign.

Before taking the League's endorsement too seriously, voters might inquire who constitutes the "Legislative Voters League of Illinois?" On the title page of the current publication appears the names of 29 persons listed as officers and directors, but to this date the writer has never contacted and has never heard of another person who is a member. Perhaps, as one voter opines, it is "closed corporation."

While the "Purpose of the League" as set forth in the Bulletin is laudable, it would be most interesting to know just what the League members lobby for at Springfield. "The By-laws of the League require that it shall be strictly non-partisan." So is J. P. Morgan.

Cornelius Needs Good Teeth

Good, straight teeth (even false ones) are necessary for cornet playing. The instrument is pressed against the lips and cuts them if the teeth are crooked. Soloist in a military band, the cornet corresponds to the first violin of an orchestra, the "soprano" of the brasses. It's also the most "agile" brass instrument, capable of executing a fast piece of music.

Drawings for the White House

Hoban's original drawings for the White House contemplated a building with wings. The central part only was erected. The design is said to have been suggested by the residence of the duke of Leinster in Dublin, but the resemblance is slight.

TO THE VOTERS OF THE EIGHTH SENATORIAL DIST.

Mr. Francis served the people of the district as a state representative for three terms, from 1920 to 1926, during which he made a very creditable record.

The most important committee of the house is the judiciary committee, which handles practically all important bills, except appropriations. This committee does about one-third of all the house committee work and is composed exclusively of lawyers. Any lawyer elected to the house automatically becomes a member.

This district has not been represented in this vital position during the past two years.

Two Republicans are to be nominated and two elected, so that nomination is election.

Narcissus

Narcissus was named for Narcissus, the son of the Ancients, who won the love of Echo but did not love her in return. She, of course, faded to a woe. Narcissus used to lie upon the brink of the stream looking at his own reflection. He finally wasted away and died. Nymphe came to remove his body and found only poet's narcissus. The Greeks believe that if Narcissus are placed on coffins madness will result.
